shortlisted for the wolfson history prize a major new history of britain that transforms our understanding of this country s past i ve waited so long so read a comprehensively researched book about black history on this island this is it a journey of discovery and a truly exciting and important work zainab abbas despite the best efforts of researchers and campaigners there remains today a steadfast tendency to reduce the history of african and caribbean people in britain to a simple story it is one that begins in 1948 with the arrival of a single ship the empire windrush and continues mostly apart from a distinct british history overlapping only on occasion amid grotesque injustice or pioneering protest yet as acclaimed historian hakim adi demonstrates from the very beginning from the moment humans first stood on this rainy isle there have been african and caribbean men and women set at britain s heart libyan legionaries patrolled hadrian s wall while rome s first african emperor died in york in elizabethan england black tudors served in the land s most eminent households while intrepid african explorers helped sir francis drake to circumnavigate the globe and as britain became a major colonial and commercial power it was african and caribbean people who led the radical struggle for freedom a struggle which raged throughout the twentieth century and continues today in black lives matter campaigns charting a course through british history with an unobscured view of the actions of african and caribbean people adi reveals how much our greatest collective achievements universal suffrage our victory over fascism the forging of the nhs owe to these men and women and how in understanding our history in these terms we are more able to fully understand our present moment the african diaspora is arguably the most important event in modern african history from the fifteenth century to the present millions of africans have been dispersed many of them forcibly others driven by economic need or political persecution to other continents creating large communities with african origins living outside their native lands the majority of these communities are in north america this historic displacement has meant that africans are irrevocably connected to economic and political developments in the west and globally among the known legacies of the diaspora are slavery colonialism racism poverty and underdevelopment yet the ways in which these same factors worked to spur the scattering of africans are not fully understood by those who were part of this migration or by scholars historians and policymakers in this definitive study of the diaspora in north america toyin falola offers a causal history of the western dispersion of africans and its effects on the modern world reengaging old and familiar debates and framing new ones that enrich the discourse surrounding africa falola isolates the thread running nearly six centuries that connects the history of slavery the transatlantic slave trade and current migrations a boon to scholars and policymakers and accessible to the general reader the book explores diverse narratives of migration and shows that the cultures that migrated from africa to the americas have the capacity to unite and create a new pan africanist movement within the globalized world toyin falola is the jacob and frances sanger mossiker chair in the humanities and university distinguished teaching professor at the university of texas at austin he is the 2011 recipient of the distinguished africanist award from the african studies association and serves as the vice president of the international scientific committee of the unesco slave route project his previous books published by the university of rochester press include the power of african cultures and nationalism and african intellectuals patrick manning refuses to divide the african diaspora into the experiences of separate regions and nations instead he follows the multiple routes that brought africans and people of african descent into contact with one another and with europe asia and the americas in weaving these stories together manning shows how the waters of the atlantic ocean the mediterranean sea and the indian ocean fueled dynamic interactions among black communities and cultures and how these patterns resembled those of a number of connected diasporas concurrently taking shape across the globe manning begins in 1400 and traces five central themes the connections that enabled africans to mutually identify and hold together as a global community discourses on race changes in economic circumstance the character of family life and the evolution of popular culture his approach reveals links among seemingly disparate worlds in the mid nineteenth century for example slavery came under attack in north america south america southern africa west africa the ottoman empire and india with former slaves rising to positions of political prominence yet at the beginning of the twentieth century the near elimination of slavery brought new forms of discrimination that removed almost all blacks from government for half a century manning underscores the profound influence that the african diaspora had on world history demonstrating the inextricable link between black migration and the rise of modernity especially in regards to the processes of industrialization and urbanization a remarkably inclusive and far reaching work the african diaspora proves that the advent of modernity cannot be imaginatively or comprehensively engaged without taking the african peoples and the african continent as a whole into account

who is an african at face value the answer seems obvious surely everyone knows who the african is it would seem but the answer becomes less obvious once other probing qualifiers are added to the question how is the african identity constructed in the face of the mosaic of identities that people of african ancestry living within and beyond the continent bear do all categorised as africans or as having an african pedigree perceive themselves as africans are all who perceive themselves as africans accepted as such are there levels of e africaness e and are some more african than others how does african identity interface with other levels of identity and citizenship in africa and what are the implications of the contentious nature of african identity and citizenship for the projects of pan africanism the making of the africa nation and africa s development trajectories contributors to the volume including ali mazrui kwesi prah gamal nkrumah helmi sharawy and marcel kitissou address these questions and more they examine the issues of african identity and citizenship the politics spurned by the co existence of peoples of different africanities in the same country and the prospects of constructing an africa nation in which africans of all hues are as sentimentally attached to as say the europeans are attached to europe though the projects of pan africanism and the making of the africa nation have not achieved the desired levels of success some of the contributors found sufficient grounds for optimism these grounds include the deepening democratic ethos in the continent which is believed will unleash a love of freedom that will supersede the fissiparous tendencies that underlie the various notions of africanity and the rise of new economic powers such as india and china which are increasingly looking towards africa as the next big destination the emergence of barrack obama whose father is kenyan as the president of the united states of america also appears to be unleashing a new wave of can do attitude it is argued that for many africans obama is both an african name they can relate to and a metaphor expressing that anything is possible if you strive hard for it with the right attitude this right attitude is an attitude that is post chauvinism for it is only by being post racial and a reconciler that a blackman with an african muslim father who was not born into privilege could emerge president of the most powerful country in the world this lesson is not lost on africans and it is a powerful boost to the african unity project a portion of a diary kept during a cable laying expedition down the west coast of africa starting from bathurst on the river gambia and terminating at the portuguese town of st paul de loanda p vii institutions found in africa african history is interpreted in terms of state building alliance formation and the rise and decline of various kingdoms coverage extends from the african resistance to colonial rule to how they have faired since africans inherited or recovered political power africa and the african diaspora is the outcome of a symposium held atportland state university in portland oregon february 2002 entitled symposium on freedom in black history designed to celebrate black history month the major themes of the conference were how africans both at home on the continent and dispersed abroad often by forces beyond their control reacted to oppression and subjugation in seeking freedom from slavery colonialism and discrimination the volume documents the many forms that oppression has taken the many forms that resistance has taken and the cultural developments that have allowed africans to adapt to the new and changing economic social and environmental conditions to win back their freedom oppressive strategies as divide and rule could be based on any one of a number of features such as skin color place of origin culture or social or economic status people drawn into the vortex of the atlantic trade and funneled into the sugar fields the swampy rice lands or the cotton coffee or tobacco plantations of the new world and elsewhere had no alternative but to risk their lives for freedom the plantation provided the context for the dehumanization of disadvantaged groups subjected to exhausting work frequent punishment and personal injustice of every kind this book demonstrates that the history and interpretation of these struggles of the oppressed peoples to free themselves have not received proportionate attention and analysis as have other aspects of that history the black handbook is the authoritative guide to the people history and politics of africa and the african diaspora up until the end of the 20th century who were black moses the black seminole the black shot and the black pimperl which pope gave the king of portugal permission to invade conquer and submit to perpetual slavery the people of africa what was the african blood brotherhood why was a jamaican the last man to be beheaded in britain who were the talented tenth why did egypt invade ethiopia in 1875 who was the first black american woman to become a millionaire who were the mangrove nine spanning three continents the black handbook describes and analyses in an accessible way the essential events ideas and personalities of the african world history of africa tracing its inner growth and world wide significance that also includes recent changes in south africa contemporary africa is the product of three major influences an indigenous heritage western culture and islamic culture the africans looks at these legacies how they co exist and their impact on the continent and the people who are called african this reader a supplement to the telecourse provides an introduction to a variety of historical and contemporary writings on africa the african novel and the modernist tradition challenges from a literary perspective the general thinking that what is european and american is uniquely different from what is african the book examines key african novels side by side with british and american modernist novels through this comparative study it demonstrates the manner in which several african novelists have taken full advantage of the experimentation that modernism offers to tackle their own crisis of culture this study shows that african novelists clearly understand what modernism is and employ to advantage its consciousness of disorder despair and anarchy the african novel and the modernist tradition is thus able to conclude that the african novel is part of a larger fictional universe
