miskimin s work considers the religious feuding hostility and occasional cooperation of catholics protestants and jews in 17th century metz in a series of pointed chapters she shows how the french crown benefited from religious disagreement in the town by using that discord to push through its centralizing political agenda despite the disapproval of local leaders and the lack of any ideological commitment to coexistence catholics protestants and jews increasingly developed daily contacts in the city as the century progressed though these contacts were often hostile they nonetheless continued and led to more complex interactions which undercut traditional religious verities using numerous examples from local court records miskimin explores the multilayered contacts between adherents of these three faiths in one of the only french towns to include this tripartite religious mix during this period as a result metz became a convenient early laboratory for the fundamental intellectual shifts at work in europe building on earlier studies of centralization this book integrates social and religious history with major political shifts to illustrate the interdependence of members of these three groups as well as the centrality of their clashes to an understanding of the climate of these turbulent times at the dawn of modernity

this study seeks to explain three models of network governance embedded in digital practices that the mainstream monotheistic religions judaism catholic christianity and islam have used to lead and manage the worldwide distribution of their local nodes exploring the connection between network governance and its digital embeddedness and showing how the latter enhances the performance of the former crumbled shells of mosques in iraq the bombing of british cathedrals in world war ii the fall of the world trade center towers on september 11 when architectural totems such as these are destroyed by conflicts and the ravages of war more than mere buildings are at stake the destruction of memory reveals the extent to which a nation weds itself to its landscape robert bevan argues that such destruction not only shatters a nation's culture and morale but is also a deliberate act of eradicating a culture's memory and ultimately its existence. Bevan combs through world history to highlight a range of wars and conflicts in which the destruction of architecture was pivotal from Cortez's razing of Aztec cities to the carpet bombings of Dresden and Tokyo in World War II to the war in the former Yugoslavia. The destruction of memory exposes the cultural war that rages behind architectural annihilation, revealing that in this subliminal assault lies the complex aim of exterminating a people. He provocatively argues for the fatally intertwined experience of genocide and cultural genocide, ultimately proposing the elevation of cultural genocide to a crime punishable by international law in an age in which Frank Gehry, I. M. Pei, and Frank Lloyd Wright are revered and yet museums and temples of priceless value are destroyed in wars around the world. Bevan challenges the notion of collateral damage, arguing that it is in fact a deliberate act of war.

This study provides analyses into the concepts of war and peace as found in the Jewish, Christian, and Muslim religions. It covers topics such as the traditions of the prophets, theologies of war, theologies of peace, and unholy war.

In Adventures of the Spirit, Phyllis Sternberg Perrakis brings together eleven American and Canadian literary gerontologists to examine a new kind of adventure for the older woman in literature. This volume of critical essays analyzes recent works by contemporary women writers whose characters' midlife and later life changes are mapped in their narratives rather than focusing on the painful losses undergone by women of a certain age. Recent narratives explore a new kind of adventure of aging, one that is spiritual in nature, enabling new ways of being and becoming but open-ended and capable of great variation in practice. In particular, these journeys of the spirit focus on the retrospective movement undergone by a midlife or older woman as she is led by inner or outer forces to assess where she has come from and decipher a shape or pattern to her journey. These journeys do not leave the body behind as they map new spiritual territory; rather, they honor spirit's embrace of the natural world and relationships as well as its aspirations for evolving development and eternal existence. The essays in Adventures of the Spirit employ a wide variety of critical lenses to chart these adventures, including archetypal, Sufi, post-colonial, and feminist analysis, archival research, aboriginal life writing, and trauma theory. These studies bring a new understanding to women's adventure of age in both literary texts and in life.
