volume one of the new cambridge history of islam which surveys the political and cultural history of islam from its late antique origins until the eleventh century brings together contributions from leading scholars in the field the book is divided into four parts the first provides an overview of the physical and political geography of the late antique middle east the second charts the rise of islam and the emergence of the islamic political order under the umayyad and the abbasid caliphs of the seventh eighth and ninth centuries followed by the dissolution of the empire in the tenth and eleventh regionalism the overlapping histories of the empire's provinces is the focus of part three while part four provides a cutting edge discussion of the sources and controversies of early islamic history including a survey of numismatics archaeology and material culture robert irwin's authoritative introduction to the fourth volume of the new cambridge history of islam offers a panoramic vision of islamic culture from its origins to around 1800 the introductory chapter which highlights key developments and introduces some of islam's most famous protagonists paves the way for an extraordinarily varied collection of essays the themes treated include religion and law conversion islam's relationship with the natural world governance and politics caliphs and kings philosophy science medicine language art architecture literature music and even cookery what emerges from this rich collection written by an international team of experts is the diversity and dynamism of the societies which created this flourishing civilization volume four of the new cambridge history of islam serves as a thematic companion to the three preceding politically oriented volumes and in coverage extends across the pre modern islamic world in this second volume starting with the caliphate of banu umayyah the martyrdom of imam husain r and the caliphate of the abbasids all areas have been covered as far as the expansion of islam was publisher description includes articles on muslims of every age and land on tribes and dynasties on the crafts and sciences on political and religious institutions on the geography ethnography of the various countries and on the history topography and monuments of the major towns and cities its scope encompasses the old arabo islamic empire the islamic countries of iran central asia the indian sub continent and indonesia the ottoman empire and all other islamic countries this is a most comprehensive and ambitious collaborative survey of islamic history and civilization volume 2 of the new cambridge history of islam is devoted to the history of the western islamic lands from the political fragmentation of the eleventh century to the beginnings of european colonialism towards the end of the eighteenth century the volume embraces a vast area from al andalus and north africa to arabia and the lands of the ottomans in the first four sections scholars all leaders in their particular fields chart the rise and fall and explain the political and religious developments of the various independent ruling dynasties across the region including famously the almohads the fatimids and mamluks and of course the ottomans the final section of the volume explores the commonalities and continuities that united these diverse and geographically disparate communities through in depth analyses of state formation conversion taxation scholarship and the military this third volume begins with the description of the conditions of spain before and after the rule of muslims and the role played by umayyad abbasid almoravid and almohad caliphs there and their encounters with the christian armies then some mention of the conquest of morocco and north africa has been given along with the details of idrisia and aghlaba's rule there after that detailed accounts of ghaznavid mongols turks and tartar mongols have been produced publisher description

this volume traces the second great expansion of the islamic world eastwards from the eleventh century to the eighteenth as the faith crossed cultural boundaries the trader and the mystic became as important as the soldier and the administrator distinctive islamic idioms began to emerge from other great linguistic traditions apart from arabic especially in turkish persian urdu swahili malay and chinese the islamic world transformed and absorbed new influences as the essays in this collection demonstrate three major features distinguish the time and place from both earlier and modern experiences of islam firstly the steppe tribal peoples of central asia had a decisive impact on the islamic lands secondly islam expanded along the trade routes of the indian ocean and the south china sea thirdly islam interacted with asian spirituality including hinduism sikhism buddhism taoism and shamanism it was during this period that islam became a truly world religion volume 5 of the new cambridge history of islam examines the history of muslim societies from 1800 to the present francis robinson a leading historian of islam has brought together a team of scholars with a broad range of expertise to explore how muslims responded to the challenges of western conquest and domination across the last two hundred years as their articles reveal the social economic political and historical circumstances which influenced these responses have in many different parts of the world empowered muslim societies and encouraged transformation and religious revival the volume offers a fascinating glimpse into the local dimensions of that revival and how regional connections have been forged synthesising the academic research of the past thirty years as well as offering substantial guidance for further study this book is the starting point for all those who wish to have a serious understanding of modern muslim societies
